A fool-proof guide to finding the perfect foundation, skin-saving hero cleansers and Zoë Kravitz on the power of scent

There's a reason your splashy summer scent disappears into a transparent mist at this time of year. Fragrance smells more intense when it's hot and humid outside, as the molecules evaporate more easily, magnifying the waft that hits your nose. So, this winter, swap your flimsy floral juices for something built on heavier notes. Narciso Rodriguez For Her Oil Musc Parfum, £67 for 30ml, opens on effervescent osmanthus, before the hushed, skin-like scents of musk and patchouli push through. Bonus: oils anchor themselves to dry skin, so the scent lasts longer. Cue oohs and aahs at the office party.
