Klorane Conditioning Balm With Flax Fiber, £8.50 This transparent gel felt like shampoo and left my long hair static – I looked like I'd had a close encounter with a balloon. It could benefit shorter styles, where flat, greasy roots are an issue, though.

Percy & Reed Perfecting Wonder Overnight Recovery, £20

An overnight conditioning treatment that absorbed instantly into dry hair (no messing!). Despite the hefty dose of protein, it washed out cleanly in the morning, leaving my locks bouncier than a beachball.

Skinny conditioners

Can these nourishers really feel lighter than a low-fat babyccino? Fine-haired Acting Beauty Editor FIONA EMBLETON hopes so...

Andrew Barton No Weight Hydrate Conditioner, £3.20

Fine hair is 20% thinner so I'm still convinced that the argan oil and coconut milk are too rich, as my hair started to feel greasy by midday. The fact that the scent was a dead ringer for a piña colada didn't hurt, though.

Pantene Pro-V In-Shower Foam Conditioner, £3.99

There's solid science behind why this looks like a blob of shaving cream: bubble-forming ingredients push the nutrients into the hair without weighing it down. All you need to know is it worked and I'm addicted.

OGX Gravity-Defying & Hydration + O2 Conditioner, £6.99

The science bit: tiny bubbles trap oxygen to keep the formula light, while cloudberry oil (yes, really) ensures hydration. For those without a chemistry degree, that translates to soft ends and perky roots. I'm in.
