

Blending for BEGINNERS

Here's the only fragrance

hack you need...

PSST...

Spray the two fragrances directly on top of each other – heavier ones first, so they don't overpower lighter scents.

Unless you were living under a rock, you'll recall '90s mood rings that changed colour depending on your emotions. You may still be recovering from the straight-out-of-Mean-Girls moment when everybody laughed as your secret crush walked by and your ring turned lurid orange with desire. Well, fast-forward a decade to a smarter perfume equivalent. It involves creating a custom-blended scent that reflects exactly how you want to feel – and be perceived. Better still, it's an affordable way to mix up a bespoke scent that will have people stopping you on the street to ask what you're wearing.

Layering doesn't have to be intimidating. Just follow our foolproof guide and layer an old favourite with a new-season scent. Think of it as creating an original fragrance for free in less time than it takes to perfect your eyeliner flick... ▶
